DETAILED ACTION

Claim Objections

Claim 2 recites the limitation "the plurality of the wear bodies" in line 2, as well as "the plurality the antennas" in lines 5 and 6. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 5,260,915 to Houihan. Referring to claim 1, FIGS. 3 and 4 of Houihan show an arm wear type communication device (10), comprising a communication device body (20b) for transmitting and receiving a signal. Furthermore, column 3, lines 21-24 of U.S. Patent No 4,847,818 to Olsen, which is incorporated by reference, discloses a wear body (20c) which is pivotally fixed (at 30b) to the communication device body in order to be worn to an arm. Houihan also discloses a sound unit (52) provided in the wear body, and an antenna, located between the sound unit and the communication device body and which is provided in the wear body. See col. 3, lines 30-33 of Olsen for the disclosure of the claimed antenna.

Referring to claim 3, Houihan discloses an arm wear type communication device, wherein the wear body has a curved part having a curvature which is smaller than a curvature of a part of the physical body when a part of the wear body is held to the part of the physical body, and the antenna is provided in the curved part. See FIG. 2 and the corresponding specification.

Claim 8 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 5,569,879 to Gloton. Gloton discloses a high dielectric chip antenna comprising, a conductor foil which is provided on the surface of a chip-shaped material which is obtained by mixing a resin with a high dielectric material, and a pattern which is formed on the surface on the conductor foil. See column 2, lines 44-59.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 2 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Houlihan in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,943,020 to Liebendoerfer et al. Referring to claim 2, Houlihan discloses all of the claimed elements of the arm wear type communication device, except for the communication device body adapted to compare the reception states of signals that are respectively obtained from a plurality of the antennas provided in the wear bodies, respectively. Liebendoerfer et al. disclose an antenna for use in a dielectric block of a radiotelephone. See column 6, lines 47-49. As best understood by the Examiner, comparing reception states, as claimed, is equivalent to receiving two adjacent frequencies (i.e., dual frequency mode), which is also disclosed by Liebendoerfer et al. See column 6, lines 51-53. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the arm wear type communication device having a plurality of pivotally fixed arm wear bodies (20a and 20c), and a plurality of antennas disposed therein, of Houlihan, to include a communication device body adapted to compare the reception states of signals, as taught by Liebendoerfer et al, to provide dual frequency mode reception.

Referring to claim 4, as indicated above, Houlihan discloses an arm wear type communication device, wherein the wear body has a curved part having a curvature which is smaller than a curvature of a part of the physical body when a part of the wear body is held to the part of the physical body, and the antenna is provided in the curved part. See FIG. 2 and the corresponding specification.

Claims 5-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Houlihan in view of Gloton et al. Houlihan discloses all of the claimed elements of the arm wear type communication device, except for the antenna formed in such a way that a pattern made of a conductor foil is formed on the surface of a material which is obtained by mixing a resin with a high dielectric material so as to become a chip shape. Gloton discloses the claimed antenna. See column 2, lines 44-59 and the Abstract. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the arm wear type communication device of Houlihan to include an antenna formed in a pattern made of a conductor foil on a surface of a material that is obtained by mixing a resin with a high dielectric material into a chip shape, as taught by Gloton et al., to provide a flat antenna for use in portable telephones.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. U.S. Patent Nos. 5,228,012 and 5,218,577 to Seager disclose wristwatch telephones having chip antennas disposed in pivotally affixed bands of the wristwatch. U.S. Patent No. 6,529,713 to Seymour discloses a wearable handset capable of communication.
